Exciting Day at Methven Cup!

Race goers were treated to exciting races at Mt. Harding Raceway on Sunday.

The Feature Race was the $40,000, 3,000 metre Lazarus Methven Cup, and what a boilder.

When favourites failed to fire, outsiders came to the fore and as the above photograph shows a very close thrilling finish with No. 1 might "Looee" driven by Tim Williams defeating "Here's Herbie" driven by Colin DeFillipi. Third place went to "Got You Covered."

The trifecta paid $6,479.60 and the first 4 a whopping $66,412.70 The main trot $25,000 what the Hill F & M Classic (2400metre), which went to the in form "Rush."

Methven track workers produced a lightning surface with the 3,000 metre cup won in 3.53.70!

Be "Enlightened" Methven!

Following a submission by the local Methven Lighting Group, with the full support of the Methven Community Board, the Methven Lighting project was included in the Ashburton District Council (ADC) Long Term Plan 2024-2034.

This means that some funding has been allocated to the project by ADC for lighting in public spaces in Methven. Importantly, for the long term ownership and sustainability, there is also a funding allocation by ADC for annual maintenance.

One initial project under development, funded by ADC, is the under-lighting of some significant trees in the town centre. This was the most highly rated idea (87%) in the feedback from the online survey conducted in 2023 by the Methven Lighting Group.

Under consideration is a community project to install lighting around the street frontages of the businesses in the centre of town, so the CBD (Central Business District) could be more vibrant, safer, provide a sense of pride for locals and attract increased numbers of visitors.

It is further proposed to commission a lighting expert group to create a comprehensive plan, Methven Lighting 2025-2029, for innovative, interactive, festive lighting using the latest lighting technologies to minimise pollution to our dark skies. The intent is to transform the town for 2029 - the 150th celebration of the founding of the Methven township bringing a legacy of lighting into the future.

Come along to the Methven Lighting Project Community meeting on Thursday 24th October, 7pm at the Function Room at Mt Hutt Memorial Hall to

- hear the latest updates
- ask your questions
- have your say

This meeting will be of particular interest to CBD business owners.

But wait, there's more Delivery Vans!

Jeanette McLennan

During research for the recent temporary display in Methven Museum on central Alford Forest Road/Forest Drive businesses, new photographs of Smith's, Henderson's and King's Methven delivery vehicles appeared, as printed in Snowfed on 11th and 25th July.

A newspaper report on a new Ford van with "body built to order in Ashburton" delivered

Mr W. A. Shemeld's Ford Model T delivery van, probably 1916 shortly after delivery
Donated by Geoff Sutton via Kath Woodley, Methven Historical Society Archives

to Shemeld's Grocer (now Café 45), amongst others, in early 1916 (Papers Past: Ashburton Guardian 22 January 1916, p4), has recently also been verified by an image (pictured). It shows a van body similar to that of Smith's Butcher/Baker Methven, known to have been built by A Corbitt, Ashburton (Snowfed, 11th July).

Methven Historical Society is grateful for the photographs supplied and, as always, welcomes any further information. The next temporary display featuring Christening Gowns, opens soon.

11 Mid Canty Artists feature at Memorial Hall Art Gallery

A new exhibition was opened last week in the Mt Hutt Memorial Hall Art Gallery.

The exhibition features the works of 11 Mid Canterbury artists exploring varied media of printing, oils, acrylics, watercolour and more.

The group of artists range from new to experienced so there is something for everyone to view and purchase. The artists meet weekly for untutored sessions at their Short Street Studio in Ashburton which are open for all abilities to come and join in.

One artist is colour blind so uses colour in a unique way. Another has a great interest in native flora and fauna which influences their work. Travel is the inspiration for another artist with others enjoying fantasy space scenes, landscapes, old buildings, florals and more.

Pop into the Mt Hutt Memorial Hall Art Gallery for a look - purchases can be made in the iHub with EFTPOS or cash.

For over 100 years, Mt Somers Rifle Club has taught, instructed, supported, guided and helped young and old to develop their skills in small bore rifle shooting.

The Club is housed at the Mt Somers Domain and meets on a Monday evening for camaraderie, guidance and helping those keen to hone their skill in the sport.

Many a young person has attributed the skills learned from smallbore shooting to helping them in other areas of their life such as developing their patience, commitment, concentration, tenacity and resilience whilst striving to improve and aiming for the bulls eye on the target in the distance.

The club is preparing to celebrate 100 years of smallbore shooting in the district, drawing its members from all over the foothills region.

Past supporters and members are invited to register for the 100 year Celebration Dinner. See the advertisement opposite to register.

Cantabrians urged to take part in pink this Breast Cancer Awareness Month

October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month and Cantabrians are being encouraged to play their part by participating in the two pinkest events of the year – the Pink Ribbon Street Appeal and the Pink Ribbon Walk.

Volunteers all over the region will be collecting donations for Breast Cancer Foundation NZ's Pink Ribbon Street Appeal on Friday 18th and Saturday 19th October. The charity is in need of people in Canterbury to collect for the appeal.

North Hagley Park will host the Pink Ribbon Walk on Sunday 20th October, where thousands of people will take part in a five or 10km charity walk to raise funds for the Foundation. Both events are an opportunity for Cantabrians to have some fun in pink while raising vital funds and awareness to stop deaths from breast cancer.

Local woman Nicole Killick will be one of the volunteers collecting for the Pink Ribbon Street Appeal.

Nicole's mother and grandmother have both been through breast cancer, "They each lost a different breast. They joke that together they're a pair! Volunteering is my way to give the little I can back as it's a big thing in my heart. Thankfully my mother and grandmother are still here and survivors. Everything they went through, they had so much support, including the bras with implants from Breast Cancer Foundation. It just made the whole process easier."

Joining Nicole to collect during the street appeal will be her 20-year-old son. "He's doing it for the Nanās"

Breast Cancer Foundation NZ's chief executive, Ah-Leen Rayner, says the money raised during Breast Cancer Awareness Month is vital to continue the charity's work.

"We don't receive any government funding, so we rely entirely on the generosity of our incredible volunteers and fundraisers to keep our life-saving programmes going. Breast cancer affects one in nine New Zealand women, but the good news is it can be successfully treated if detected early. The money raised through the Pink Ribbon Street Appeal will help to support patients going through treatment and make sure more women can get an earlier diagnosis."

Around 385 women are diagnosed with breast cancer across Canterbury every year. The survival rate for breast cancer if diagnosed early is 92%. Breast Cancer Foundation NZ is urging all women to be "breast aware" to give themselves the best chance of surviving breast cancer – that means getting to know the normal look and feel of their breasts, regularly touching and looking for any changes, and getting changes checked by a GP as soon as possible. For women aged 45-69, free mammograms are available through BreastScreen Aotearoa every two years.

To sign up to collect for the Pink Ribbon Street Appeal, visit pinkribbonvolunteer.org.nz

Stoat concern in Enchanted Forest

Kath Woodley

The Methven Birdsong Trust is extremely worried by the results of its initial Tunnel Tracking Programme.

The programme uses carbon footprint tunnels to find the animals present with peanut butter to attract them. This identified a stoat living in the immediate area of Mt Hutt Station Rd. Department Of Conservation experts looked at the distinctive footprints and a sighting was reported near the entrance to the Enchanted Forest.

Stoats are now in the middle of their breeding cycle with the male feeding the pregnant female. Within a few weeks 5-6 kits will be born. Stoats are voracious killers of all birds but particularly our nesting native birds.

Until all companion cats in the Methven area are microchipped there is a danger that they may be trapped if stoat traps are put out. Even though this danger is minimal (because the traps are only designed for stoat catching and the bait used is unlikely to attract cats), the microchip would turn off the trap when the cat came near.

Why is there only a reported 1% of companion cats micro-chipped in Methven? Is it the cost (around $60) or do Methven residents not understand how microchips work? The Methven Birdsong Trust needs to know so it can plan its next moves to bring birdsong back to Methven.

NATIONAL MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT

Law Changes bring added protection James Meager

Justice reforms will bring added protection to rural communities.

The Government's latest justice reforms will support rural New Zealand, where isolation and distance from police stations can make communities particularly vulnerable to criminal activity. The comprehensive package of law changes will provide much-needed protection for our farming communities and rural businesses.

Of particular significance for rural areas is the new aggravating factor being introduced to address offences against sole-charge workers and those whose homes and businesses are interconnected. This change directly acknowledges the reality faced by many rural store owners, farmers, and contractors who often work alone and live on their business premises.

The crackdown on gang activity will have a meaningful impact on rural areas, where gang movements have historically been harder to monitor and control and where increasingly gangs are looking to set up shop, away from prying eyes. From 21st November, the ban on gang insignia in all public places and new powers allowing police to break up gang gatherings will help prevent intimidating behaviour that has affected many rural communities. The new non-consorting orders, lasting up to three years, will make it harder for gang members to organise criminal activities in remote areas.

Rural victims of crime will also benefit from the Government's $18 million investment in victim support services. The establishment of regional victim networks will ensure that those in remote areas have better access to support services, while new specialist assistance for writing victim impact statements will ensure rural voices are heard in court proceedings.

For retailers and farmers who have faced repeated break-ins or theft, the reforms' emphasis on tougher sentencing and reduced discounts for repeat offenders, sends a clear message that rural crime will not be tolerated. These reforms recognise that rural communities deserve the same level of protection as urban areas. By strengthening penalties, supporting victims, and giving police new tools to combat gang activity, these changes will help ensure safer and more secure rural communities throughout New Zealand.

Art notebook

A fundraising notebook featuring art works from the Ashburton Art Gallery Collection provides a glimpse into some of more than 700 works publicly owned by the community.

As custodian of the public collection, the Ashburton Art Gallery Inc (AAG Inc), is responsible for the collection, which features works exemplifying excellence and historical and artistic significance to the Whakatere Ashburton District and wider Waitaha Canterbury region.

The new 84-page notebook features 33 works and is a snapshot of the connections, stories, ideas, and imaginations of the magnificent artists the gallery has worked with over many years.

"After more than 25 years, the Ashburton Art Gallery remains the only public gallery in our community. The collection is at the heart of the gallery and the works collectively contribute to the District's artistic identity and individually are often included in Ashburton Art Gallery exhibitions," says AAG Inc Committee Member, Fleur Tompsett.

The notebook is the culmination of months of work by AAG Inc committee members, with Ashburton Art Gallery and Museum staff being instrumental in producing the notebook, from photographing the artworks

Many local artists' works are featured in the notebook, including Ngaio McKee, Robin Arnst, Kath Von Tunzelmann, Michael Armstrong, Barbara Jaine, Austen Deans, David Elliot, and Hamish Coleman, to name a few.

Fleur Tompsett

"The artworks chosen are only a small selection of works in the collection. The variety and scope of the works is a great reflection of the many connections formed over the years, and the wealth of talent connected to our District," says Fleur.

"On the community's behalf, we are keen to acquire or commission works that diversify both the artists and forms of art represented in the collection. Funds raised from the sale of this notebook will help us continue to grow this collection."

Fleur says the notebook is a way to share the collection in a way which brings the works directly into people's homes, connecting them to the works which are owned by our community. "We are especially grateful to the local businesses and families who helped support this initiative and helped make it a reality."

The notebook is available for purchase through AAG Inc Committee members or from the Ashburton Art Gallery and Museum gift shop.

GROW YOUR OWN

Mary Ralston

The rain recently was very welcome but will be keeping soil temps low.

When the soil has dried enough to plant, it's probably best to keep to those varieties that are happy in cool soils and changeable weather – potatoes, brassicas, peas, onions, lettuce, silver beet and spinach.

It's easy to get carried away with early planting, especially of brassicas and potatoes, which are easy to grow and are readily available at the hardware shop. But both of these take up quite a bit of room and are in the ground for a long time. It's good to leave enough space in your patch for some of the true summer veges – beans, zucchinis, tomatoes and cucumbers.

Tomatoes, peppers and cucumbers do reliably well in a greenhouse but if you don't have that luxury, outside is possible (in a good year). Choosing the right site and the right variety is key – cherry tomatoes ripen much earlier than "normal" sized tomatoes, so if you have a veg patch in the open, I'd stick to cherry toms, such as the prolific and very tasty Sweet 100. If you have a sheltered site, such as a north-facing wall or fence, normal ones will probably ripen. Choose varieties such as Early Girl, which, as the name suggests, ripen earlier than many others. They also have one of the best flavour of any tomatoes so you can't go wrong.

Beans are a great summer veg and very nutritious. And one of the great reasons for growing them is that they are rarely available in the shops, unlike onions or potatoes. Climbing beans are economical on space – a frame or tepee for them to grow up means you only need a small area. Cucumbers can also be trained to grow up, saving a lot of space and it also keeps them off the ground so they are less prone to disease.

Zucchini's are always for sale in the shops, but nothing beats the flavour and freshness of home-grown. The down-side of growing zucchini's is that most home veg growers do, so there's often a glut in the neighbourhood by late summer. They also take up a lot of room, but they're easy to grow and give a great feeling of satisfaction when you have beautiful zucchini's fried in butter for dinner.

So, plan ahead – think of your vegetable priorities and look around at your property – an empty spot in the flower garden may be just the place for a zucchini, and perhaps a previously unused north-facing fence or wall could produce a bumper crop of beans or tomatoes!

Golf Club Championships Finals Day 2024

Geoff Rhodes

This year's route to the finals had delivered a number of unexpected results with none of last year's champions being present for the 2024 finals. This meant every grade would have a new champion after completing the challenging 36-hole final.

In the Ladies finals, following her recent national achievements, we had a buoyant Becky Hood taking on Heather Santy in Bronze B. In Bronze A we had Lee McLintock versus Emma Hampton, with the premiere Silver grade final being fought out between Katrina McCutcheon and Jenny Senior.

For the Men's finals the Junior grade was contested by Graham Shaw and Geoff Rhodes. In the Intermediate grade, another good match-up between Frank Sandys and Piers Rolton. In the premiere Senior grade championship, Simon Wareing took on the consistent Dayle Lucas in the final match.

The green keeping team had prepared the course to be in excellent condition, thanks to Paulie Plimmer, Phil Johnson, Chris Cavanagh and Piers Rolton for their hard work to present the course in such great condition. To be expected for such an occasion, the pin positions they had chosen for the finals were in some extremely tricky locations.

The morning dawned with a heavy dew making the going wet underfoot. The greens ran slow early on, but the sun did not disappoint, showing up quite early in the morning, drying out the greens and speeding them up a touch. The rising temperatures also allowed a few of the layers to be removed, as the finals and finalists hotted up.

At the 18 hole mid-point, the Ladies Bronze B was looking a little one sided with Becky extending her recent good form to take an early lead to be 8 holes up. The other finals were very close with Emma leading Lee by 1 hole in Bronze A and in the Silver grade, Katrina was just 1 hole to the good over Jenny.

In the Men's grades it was all square between Graham and Geoff in the Junior final, while in the Intermediate match Piers was 5 holes up over Frank. In the Senior grade, Dayle was 7 ahead at the lunch break.

A big thank you goes to Ruth Smith and her many helpers for supplying a wonderful lunch time spread which did a great job to replenish the energy expended during the morning's activities.

It was great to see a good number of people following a few of the matches, particularly the Silver Ladies and the Senior Men's where the better golfers were showing their talents and providing a grand spectacle for the followers to see.

After a great day's play by all finalists, the matches were eventually decided with the 2024 Club Champions being:

Ladies Bronze B: Becky Hood

Ladies Bronze A: Lee McLintock

Ladies Silver: Katrina McCutcheon

Men's Junior: Geoff Rhodes

Men's Intermediate: Piers Rolton

Men's Senior: Dayle Lucas
